

Red boxes in the flowchart represent separate microthreads; they are all waiting at the same time. We can obviously receive a connection while we're also working on processing a client's message, and so on.